

New EU legislation means that from December 2014 any business selling or serving food, whether it is pre-packed or made on site, must offer information to customers regarding the 14 common allergens named by the Food Standard Agency (FSA) found within the food.

This includes any allergens in any food bought into the company and used within food.

To ensure that Fisherfield are complying with the legislation all staff are trained in basic food hygiene, allergen awareness and the food labelling system.